Defends Documentation Of New Book

Mr. Thomas O'Neill quotes the "National Committee for Civic Responsibility" as his source in denouncing the book, "None Dare Call It Treason." First, this committee is an unofficial arm of the Johnson administration, formed recently for the expressed purpose of fighting Barry Goldwater. Second, the article implies that the book is a poor product of negligent research.

The fact is that it is very carefully researched and detailed. It names individuals and groups directly. Among its references are: The Senate Internal Security Committee, the House on Unamerican Activities, J. Edgar Hoover, the U. S. Supreme Court, the UN Charter, Congressional Records, and the NEA Journal. These are a few of hundreds of individual references.

May I suggest that Mr. O'Neill could be so biased as to be unable to be objective in his reporting. The whole objective of this book is to bring to general knowledge the socialistically-oriented organization which dominates the CIA and the State Department, and effectively operates our government.
